FAMOUS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE CELEBRATES JUBILEE

On June 22 and 23 the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, Ontario, celebrated the Diamond Jubilee of its founding. Established in 1854 with an endowment of twenty-eight students, there are now twenty-six large buildings with approximately one hundred lecture rooms and laboratories. The recreation grounds include, besides the college campus, a magnificent park and recreation field of more than two hundred acres, and the farm of the college comprises more than seven hundred acres of high-class land. Herds and flocks of livestock to the extent of more than two hundred animals are kept for class work and research. The development of O.A.C. 21 barley and O.A.C. varieties of wheat and oats is concrete evidence of the great value of the experimental work done at the college, which has meant many millions of dollars to farmers in Canada and the United States. The layout shows two of the buildings of the Ontario Agricultural College. Top, in the Dairy Building; bottom, is the Field Hand-handy Building; and next is a picture of Dr. G. I. Christie, who is president of the college.

SOUTH AFRICAN BATTLEFIELD PILGRIMS GREETED BY THE KING

This picture was taken in the grounds at the back of Buckingham Palace and the King and Queen can be seen receiving the party of South African pilgrims who have journeyed to Europe to visit the battlefields of France and Flanders. With the King and Queen are Col. Thackeray, Earl Jellicoe, and Mr. J. H. Aldred, who is the leader of the pilgrims.

BRITISH HIGH COMMISSIONER TO BE TRANSFERRED

The appointment of Sir William Clark, at present British High Commissioner to Canada, to be High Commissioner to the Union of South Africa and native protectorates, was among the official appointments announced from London.
